Bandage Removal

Perhaps the earliest known treatment, the bandage helps by applying pressure and staunching blood flow. Advances in medicine tell us now that old bandages can become soiled, dramatically increasing the chances of infections, which are usually fatal.

Exorcism

The exorcism, while not a medical procedure, is a very helpful tool for the doctor to have under his belt. Satanic or demonic possession can have an acute effect on the health of the patient. As such, the doctor should have his Bible and incantations ready at all times.

Facial Reconstruction

A radical new procedure, facial reconstruction involves fracturing and reorganizing the bones of the patient's face. As such, it should be used only in the most extreme cases, when there is no other way to standardize the patient's appearance.

Fang Extraction

Using a dental key, we were able to remove the fangs that the patient had within his mouth. Without treating the underlying causes, they will grow back. However, for the time being, he looks far more like the other denizens of London.

Good Shave

While any barber can shave, it takes a true medical professional to shave so well that the hair will not come back. By means of a silver-bladed straightedge razor, you can prevent the hair from returning, at least until the next full moon.

Herbal Remedy

Often, the simple herbs that nature provides are precisely what a patient needs most. The use of a fairly straightforward admixture of wormwood, garlic, and wolfsbane will serve quite well. Delivery of said herbs can be through consumption or inhalation of their burned essences.

Holy Water

Any doctor treating the kinds of patients that you do will need to have a good supply of this lying around. For tangible patients, a glass usually does the trick, though many say that it burns going down. Incorporal patients are trickier.

Laudanum

A recent and popular discovery from the East, these drugs, compounded from the seed of the poppy, can help ease your patients through the pain often associated with undoing their conditions - or that have arisen as a result of their condition. Addiction is an unlikely side effect.

Realignment of the Humours

One of the oldest treatments, the realignment of the humours dates back to the ancient Greeks. Even they understood that a proper balance of blood, phlegm, choleric, and melancholic is essential to the proper function of the human body. Various techniques can help to bring these back into order, from bloodletting to nasal clearings.

Perhaps the earliest known treatment, the bandage helps by applying pressure and staunching blood flow. Advances in medicine tell us now that old bandages can become soiled, dramatically increasing the chances of infections, which are usually fatal.

Exorcism

The exorcism, while not a medical procedure, is a very helpful tool for the doctor to have under his belt. Satanic or demonic possession can have an acute effect on the health of the patient. As such, the doctor should have his Bible and incantations ready at all times.

Facial Reconstruction

A radical new procedure, facial reconstruction involves fracturing and reorganizing the bones of the patient's face. As such, it should be used only in the most extreme cases, when there is no other way to standardize the patient's appearance.

Fang Extraction

Using a dental key, we were able to remove the fangs that the patient had within his mouth. Without treating the underlying causes, they will grow back. However, for the time being, he looks far more like the other denizens of London.

Good Shave

While any barber can shave, it takes a true medical professional to shave so well that the hair will not come back. By means of a silver-bladed straightedge razor, you can prevent the hair from returning, at least until the next full moon.

Herbal Remedy

Often, the simple herbs that nature provides are precisely what a patient needs most. The use of a fairly straightforward admixture of wormwood, garlic, and wolfsbane will serve quite well. Delivery of said herbs can be through consumption or inhalation of their burned essences.

Holy Water

Any doctor treating the kinds of patients that you do will need to have a good supply of this lying around. For tangible patients, a glass usually does the trick, though many say that it burns going down. Incorporal patients are trickier.

Laudanum

A recent and popular discovery from the East, these drugs, compounded from the seed of the poppy, can help ease your patients through the pain often associated with undoing their conditions - or that have arisen as a result of their condition. Addiction is an unlikely side effect.

Realignment of the Humours

One of the oldest treatments, the realignment of the humours dates back to the ancient Greeks. Even they understood that a proper balance of blood, phlegm, choleric, and melancholic is essential to the proper function of the human body. Various techniques can help to bring these back into order, from bloodletting to nasal clearings.

Silver-pin Acupuncture

Doctors who have travelled to the Orient have brought back a technique for relieving many symptoms through the piercing of the skin with pins. The use of silver pins in the process has been demonstrated to be the only way to relieve symptoms related to the changing cycles of the moon.

Trepanation

A popular and easy procedure, trepanation involves drilling a hole into the side or front of the skull in order to relieve pressure on the brain of the suffering patient. Such pressure is common among the mentally ill, and its relief is often accompanied by a relief of those symptoms.

Panacea

An expensive potion, the panacea is essential for doctors treating patients whose conditions are not well studied.

Furthermore, the panacea may be substituted for any treatment that a doctor needs but finds in short supply.
